DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

West of the Davis House is an attractive two story, four bay long, four bay deep, double house, constructed of frame upon a masonry foundation. One gable faces Pine Street and possesses a porch across its northern two bays. An 'A' roof rises above the two northern bays, the two southern bays having a shed roof. Beneath the porch, closest the north facade, is an entrance to the dwelling. The same fenestration exists on the west gable.

The single most outstanding feature of the building is the pierced eave board along the gable ends which is similar to its neighbor to the west, although a slightly different design. The north, Third Street, facade has four symmetrical 6/6 windows, although the position of the two outter windows appears to have been altered. Possibly they were doors. The 'A' roof is covered with raised seam tin and a stuccoed chimney rises from the center of the roof.

A portion of turned balustrade remains on the west shed roof porch.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Cooling Duplex or Palmer Row is an attractive duplex possessing many original features as well as alterations. It apparently looked similar to the Shelton Duplex but was altered in early twentieth century to have entrances and porches on the gables. The original pierced barge board is the single most attractive feature of the dwelling.

Like its neighbor to the east, the house was probably built by David Palmer, a builder in Chesapeake City in the middle of the nineteenth century.
